

Shorelines

By Carl Kohler

Mr. Roger W. Sperry of Altadena, California was sitting atop the rocks of the South Jetty, fishing the Gulfside water with live shrimp bait and wondering if it really was true that "They Bite Everyday At Port Aransas" when a huge Kingfish suddenly struck a school of Mullet --leaping six feet out of the water and hitting Mr. Sperry on the hip, knocking him down into the rocks at the water's level where he managed to grab the giant Kingfish, wrestling the wildly struggling prize into a crevice which helped hold it until it had died. At WOODY'S BOAT BASIN the Kingfish was weighed and measured at 25-pounds, 45-inches!
