

Terminal connections of sensory fibers in the skin involves much overlap with each fiber supplying an area of skin roughly of the order of a half inch in diameter. The overlap, instead of making for confusion, enables more precise localization of cutaneous points, as indicated.

The same principle presumably prevails in the central connections.

- ★ — a > b
- — a > c > b
- — c > a > d > b
- ▲ — d > c > b > a
- + — c > d > a

